

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A mobile station and a method for selecting a public land mobile network thereby which are capable of reducing roaming time and electric current consumption of a mobile station battery by previously determining whether a public land mobile network corresponding to currently received public land mobile network information can be roamed and selectively registering its location in only a base station with a roaming function according to the determination during international roaming.

10